

I enjoy the fact I no longer receive unwanted telephone calls from telemarketers. People should not have to buy caller ID in order to know in advance that the person calling them is someone you do not wish to speak to.

Telemarketers invade privacy. They call at inopportune times, while you are cooking dinner, after you have been at home, while your kids are getting baths, etc. Watering down Indiana's law will only result in my personal time being interrupted.